

Copyright Statement for TNMoC website

The National Museum of Computing is committed to respecting copyright and other intellectual property rights. We make every effort to protect The National Museum of Computing's copyright and trademarks.

All intellectual property rights in all material on The National Museum of Computing's website belong to The National Museum of Computing or other rights holders.

Such material, including images, text, sound and video clips, may be reproduced free of charge by individuals for their personal use for genuine non-commercial research or private study and in certain other limited circumstances, provided that it is acknowledged. Useful information on using copyright may be found at <https://www.gov.uk/browse/business/intellectual-property>. Before copying any material from our website it is your responsibility to obtain permission from copyright holders or their representatives as appropriate, and failure to do so may constitute an infringement of copyright.

We do not warrant or represent that use of material displayed on our website will not infringe the rights of third parties not owned or affiliated with the Museum.

Our website provides links to other websites. The National Museum of Computing has no control over these sites nor as to how any information provided on such sites may be used.

We make all reasonable efforts to trace third party copyright owners of images and other material at this website to obtain permissions for reproductions, so that we can use and promote our assets as well as safeguard and provide access to items in our collection. Please contact us if you are the owner of the copyright or related rights in any of the material on this website and believe that use of this material infringes your intellectual property rights, by sending us your contact details, the URL of the relevant page on which the material appears and the nature of your objection. We will take down the material from our website upon receipt of your written objection and our initial verification of your complaint, while the matter is investigated.

If you would like to use any image or other material, or need a high-resolution image file, please contact:
